

CAMDEN NEWS NOTES

Notwithstanding yesterday's disappointing rain, the boys and girls of the Church of the Immaculate Conception had their annual procession from the church to St. Mary's School.

"Yes, sir, your Honor, she sure can raise Cain when she gets them skull busters on," said Irving Warren, colored, to Recorder Stackhouse when arraigned yesterday for chastising his "lady friend," Gussy Smith. The defendant defined "skull busters" as being the outcome of gun drinking. He was discharged amidst the laughter of the court.

Wanted in Baltimore to answer a charge of embezzlement, John Lomerio was arrested at the Victor Talking Machine Company's plant yesterday by Detective Schregler and Troncone. The man, who was held pending requisition papers, is alleged to have embezzled $93 from Steward and Co., by whom he was employed.

Members of the congregation of the State Street M. E. Church last night gave a reception to Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Surtees, the former being returned as pastor for another year.
