

HERE AND THERE IN CAMDEN

Stephen Chancelly, three years old, of 631 South Fourth street, broke his shoulder in a fall from a chair yesterday. He was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital.

Rev. William C. Russel, a former pastor and now secretary of the Combined Foreign and Home Mission Society, of the American Baptist Publication Society, spoke at the Camden Baptist Church yesterday.

At the Forum held at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday the address was made by Dr. E. R. Johnstone, superintendent of the Vineland Home for Feeble Minded Children, whose theme was "What the Feeble Minded Offer in the War Situation."

Vallariani Di Giacomi, 33 years old, of Paulsboro, Gloucester county, was taken to Cooper Hospital, Camden, yesterday, suffering from a serious stab wound of the abdomen. To detective Troncone he said he had been stabbed in a fight over a bottle of rum.

Two Camdenites were suddenly called by death yesterday. Patrick Lyon, 53 years old, of 318 Federal street, was found unconscious at his home and died shortly after his removal to Cooper Hospital. Coroner Pratt said death was due to apoplexy.

Harty Vincent, 50 years old, of 319 Chester street, was found dead on a couch. Coroner Pratt said his death was due to hemorrhages.

While there is an unwritten law against Sunday funerals in Camden churches, an exception was made yesterday in connection with the obsequies of Mrs. Elizabeth K. Davis, widow of James L. Davis, which were held yesterday at the Kaighn Avenue M. E. Church. Mrs. Davis was 83 years of age.
